The Bertram family established itself in Canada when John Bertram (1829 – 1906) and his wife Elizabeth Bennet (1831 – 1904) moved from Peeblesshire, Scotland to Canada in 1852. Research into the Bertram family history has shown that the family originated in what is modern day France and entered into England at the time of William the Conquer, through one of his knights known as Sir. Richard Bertram. The family then remained in Northumberland and southern Scotland until John Bertram moved to Canada. Arriving in Canada, John and Elizabeth were to stay in Montreal but due to fires that year were forced to move on to Toronto. During the voyage to Toronto, John made a chance acquaintance who suggested John find employment in Dundas. Following a downturn in the economy, John Bertram moved his family to Kent County for five years during which time they lived on a hundred acre bush farm. In 1862, the Bertram family moved back to Dundas and after several successful years in the engineering business was able to construct a family home known as Glenholme. This was the prime residence for John Bertram and his family. The Bertram family lived primarily in Dundas until the mid twentieth century when the family moved across the country and with several members of the family living in the United States, Costa Rica, and Australia.

The Bertram family was primarily tied to the business established by John Bertram in Dundas. The John Bertram & Sons Company employed several members of the Bertram family including John's sons Alexander, Henry, and James Bennet. Henry Bertram's son Graham would also eventually serve as the last president of John Bertram & Sons Co. before its sale to Russell Industries. Several of the Bertram family members have had other prominent roles including: Alexander Bertram became a Brigadier General in the Canadian military and head of the Shell Committee of 1915 -1916; T.A. Bertram who was a physician and the Medical Health Officer for Dundas; Alexander's son Richard Edgar Bertram would become a pilot in the Royal Canadian Air force; Jessie Bertram's son John Bertram Stirling became Chancellor of Queen's University in 1960.

Administrative History:

The administrative history of the records in this collection is not clear, the provenance of most of the documents has been lost giving no indication who created or used a number of the records. The result is that this collection is comprised of the Bertram records that do not clearly fit into any of the established Bertram fonds. This includes a large selection of records created by Janet Bertram Brown during her research into the family history.

Scope and Content:

The collection is comprised of a wide range of records that originate from a number of activities. These include correspondence between family members about the family history and other topics. There are also records relating to Richard Edgar Bertram's flight training for the RCAF and his death. There are copies of documents relating to memorial services for the first and second world wars. There is a large collection of Canadian Tool Works picnic ribbons and other miscellaneous ribbons from groups and events around Dundas. The largest coherent collection of records in this collection are those belonging to Janet Bertram Brown and her genealogical research. These documents are primary copies of birth, death, baptism records along with the military service records of several family members. There are extensive handwritten notes and inventories created by Janet Bertram Brown, including a finding aid for the records of the Dundas Historical Society Museum. A small group of newspaper articles is also included in this collection, focusing primarily on the Bertram family and their business. The collection also includes a large number of photographs that relate to the family but do not have a clear provenance or place in other fonds.

In some cases photographs which belong to the Bertram family were included in the Dundas Museum and Archives' Photograph Collection. Images identified as belonging to the Bertram family have been identified and their collection number provided. These items will remain part of the Photograph Collection for the time being.

The collection is comprised of the following types of documents: correspondence, a flight log book, memorial programmes, ribbons, pins, newspaper and journal articles, cemetery records, copies of: birth certificates, death certificates, baptism records, military enlistment forms, hospital records, medal award lists, genealogy notes, wedding announcements, and photographs.

The collection is comprised of a number of series that have been identified by the archivist. These series were not found in any logical order and there is no sign that they were in their original order and as such have been arranged in a chronological order by the archivist. In particular, Series 8 - Janet Bertram Brown Genealogy Research 19- - 2002: Sub - series 3 - Establishment of Dundas Historical Museum Records 1953 – 2002 has been arranged in a chronological order by mail recipient as this was the way that they were arranged, imperfectly, when they came into his care. This series of records is also closely related to the records in the H. Graham Bertram fonds, in that many of the records in this series are copies of the originals in the H. Graham Bertram fonds.
